

At VERVE WINE prices range from $15 to $1,000

Dustin Wilson has come a long way since co-starring in the 2012 documentary Somm, which followed four wine experts studying for the Master Sommelier exam. His latest project? A San Francisco outpost of his Manhattan wine shop, Verve Wine, on Fillmore Street. A Bay Area presence was always part of the plan, partly to have better access to the wines that Wilson champions: those made by family-owned producers with sustainable, organic and biodynamic vineyards. Inside the airy space, shelves are lined with close to 3,000 bottles, mostly from Europe and California. (There are many more in storage that you can order on-site for delivery within 24 hours.) The centerpiece is a long communal table for hosting events and tastings because, as Wilson says, "Connecting people with each other and with the winemakers is a big part of who we are." 2358 Fillmore St., S.F., 415-896-4935; vervewine.com. BROOKE PORTER KATZ restaurants to know now: Makani boosts Rose Avenue's reputation as a Venice dining destination, showcasing executive chef Kevin Lee's Korean-inspired cooking through a local lens. 512 Rose Ave., Venice, 424-645-5410; makanivenice.com. • Chef Nichole Accettola translates 15 years of living in Copenhagen to San Francisco's food scene with Kantine, a daytime restaurant featuring her riffs on Danish specialties. 1906 Market St., S.F., 415-735-7123; kantinesf.com. • Malibu Farm is expanding to Newport Beach's Lido Marina Village, where owner Helene Henderson is also opening an ice cream shop and a home/lifestyle boutique. 3420 Via Oporto, Ste. 101, Newport Beach, 858-587-8888; malibu-farm.com. • The authentic Italian cooking that has attracted a starry clientele to Madeo Ristorante in West Hollywood for more than three decades can now be found in Beverly Hills through 2019, when it will relocate back to its original, spruced-up digs on Beverly Boulevard. 362 N. Camden Dr., Beverly Hills, 310-859-4903: madeoristorante.com, JESSICA RITZ

FRESH Takes

DIRTY LEMON

+cbd contains 20 mg of cannabidiol and features a logo designed by tattoo artist and BEBOE co-founder SCOTT CAMPBELL. $65/case

THIRST Aid

In collaboration with luxury cannabis purveyor Beboe, direct-toconsumer beverage brand Dirty Lemon debuts a calming CBDinfused elixir.

To order, text Dirty Lemon at 917-568-0640 and mention +cbd.